From the President

- Tom Marnik, P.E.

Brrrr, Brrrrr, Brrrrrr, it’s been so cold in Nebraska the last two weeks I think my keyboard is frozen, the B’s and r’s keep repeating. It is also the time of year I’m told people are the most depressed, so try a kind comment today to the people you interact with, it will warm up their day.

I had the opportunity to be one of the judges at the Future Cities Competition, January 20th, and I was amazed at the level of knowledge the 7th and 8th grade young adults had about their cities. I would say each team spent at least a hundred hours or more working on each projects to prepare for this ASCE sponsored event. This type of outreach to our young students is a fundamental part of what ASCE is and should be. I would like to thank Mike McIntosh and Joe Zadina for a tremendous effort in running this well coordinated event. This is the first year for both Mike and Joe and they jumped in with both feet. Next time you see them let them know your appreciation.

The 24 Annual Geotechnical Conference is February 16th, and we will have a geotechnical related speaker for our Thursday night dinner meeting February 15th. This has become a regionally renowned event, consider attending both the conference and the dinner meeting. Additionally we will be having a special guest appearance at the dinner meeting. The UNO students will be giving a short presentation on the progress of their concrete canoe and steel bridge designs.

Remember, February 18th – 24th is EWEEK and there will be lots of engineering related activities to keep you active and perhaps a little warmer. Get involved.
